GEOGRAPHY OF COMMUNIST CHINA

This course on the Geography of Communist China, essentially for non-geographers, is for analysts, desk officers, reports officers, librarians, and imagery analysts who would benefit from an integrated view of the geography of Communist China. The material is presented in a systematic sequence; first, a general overview; then a regional examination of the country; and finally, a more detailed topical study of some of the major aspects of the physical and economic geography of China. Emphasis is placed on getting the student himself to relate the facts of geography to his own specific responsibilities in regard to Communist China. A text has been especially compiled for use in this course. The text is unclassified and will be supplemented with classified slides, maps, and other material.
